The president spent most of his remarks on the bill at the White House explaining the $1 trillion-plus overhaul in non-partisan fashion, as his party prepares to celebrate Saturday the victory they say ought to extend coverage to all 46 million uninsured Americans. "The American people will be able to rest easier tonight because of the progress we have made," said Obama, who is holding his party's annual meeting in Boston with roughly 1,000 other politicians. "We have done what we promised we would do. We have passed the kind of universal health insurance that our system can no longer afford to ignore." The president devoted most of his speech to describing the plan, which Obama called "a solution to one of the biggest problems any of us face as a country." He said details on the healthcare reform plan will be released "by the end of the week," but further details as well as more substantial comments on the measure could happen in the coming days through briefings and in-person appearances by administration officials. White House officials say the president will discuss the bill openly with his cabinet on Thursday. President Barack Obama hosts a meeting with his
