open a tab to this file, use ctrl+click to open multiple tabs, as a first class citizen on every tab 2 ways to do it : 1) double click on the tab name, to open the file 2) click on the file ( double click as above),then click on Open in New Tab, right click on the file name, select New Tab, enter name of your choice I have a pdf you can try it, it also gives you the tabs for the print. I have checked your links and i will try to send you the pdf and i will comment on it once i send it to you. Click to expand... Thank you for providing a file for download :) and thank you in advance for the pdf comment, it's much appreciated. Thanks for the link! I was right on the money to guess it was a social oriented unit (group) of some sort, and sure enough, it is! I first guessed these were pictures of a group -- usually they have a group name in the corner, or a chat/discussion room is on the bottom. I was looking for a unit's version of leaderboard (were the cards on the table move around the table?) Here's a little bit of context for you. I'm looking into personal development for myself and my family, and I'm also looking into how the military developed their leadership. I believe there's a correlation between the two. The military needs to be in the shape it's in now for a variety of reasons: 1. No other nation is in the shape it's in (Russia isn't even close to what it was in the early '90s, and their middle class has taken a hit). 2. The military needs to continue to serve as a source of inspiration and emulation, and that can't happen if it isn't up to date and well qualified, which it can't be if the basics of leadership aren't understood. 3. The military needs to be diverse enough to be able to change with and adapt to a variety of conditions. It has to be flexible enough to anticipate and support a variety of scenarios from diplomacy to war, from mass mobilization to highly specialized operations. So while the leadership structures are very different, the principles of leadership development are the same. You can see the idea through the lens of the military. Consider your unit's leadership as the problem solving (P) leader (first
