The.Photo : Justin Sullivan (Getty Images) When the election of Donald Trump to the presidency prompted liberal movie stars and self-declared artists to begin demonstrating their outrage and political awareness in ways that typically go underappreciated in cinema, they (potentially inadvertently) paved the way for a singular cinematic statement that is almost laughably awful and completely brilliant. That, of course, is Carol, a movie about the unlikely friendship that develops between an older, very grumpy lesbian cartoonist and her team of pissed-off cartoon ducks, which is directed by Todd Solondz and written by Jill Godmilow (The Crying Game, Hidden Figures), starring Cate Blanchett as the senior citizen perusing her now-legendary mandala art and Robert De Niro as a very drunk cartoon duck. As might be expected, this movie is fantastic, in a movie bad sort of way. Blanche 6d1f23a050
